

Shield Rebalance

The Problem

EDRPG uses modified values for the Ships that are mostly based on the Elite Dangerous values.

Agility is E:Ds Maneuverability

Speed is ( E:Ds Boost Speed - 200 ) / 20

Hull is E:Ds Armor * x, where x is based on the Ships size, 0.5 for Small, 0.75 for Medium and 1.0 for Large, with a few exceptions.

Now the Elite Dangerous Formula for Shield Strength is:

Base Shield Strength * (Ship Hull Mass - Shield Optimal Mass) or something like that. Not really fun to calculate. This means that for example a 3A Shield is different on each Ship.

EDRPG uses a Static Table though, so each 3A Shield is the same. This leads to the problem that Ships that should have strong Shields have very weak ones, while Ships that shouldn't have a strong one suddenly do. The two peak examples are:

Imperial Courier: Has 340 Shield with a 3A. In EDRPG its just 105.

Type 6: Has 153 Shield with a 5A. In EDRPG it has 220.

So Space Combat and Ship Balance is broken due to that.

The Solution

I tried several different things.

Modifiers per Ship similar to the “Jump Range” for Explorers.

A redistribution of the values.

Adding a special Shield Bonus.

But nope, nothing really worked. So i decided that the best Solution would be a lookup Table for each Ship. When buying a new Shield and filling the Sheet, you no longer look at the unified Shield Table in the Modules Chapter, instead you look at your Ships Shield Table.

In Theory, Combat shouldn't change much. Enemies are affected by that just as the player, but Combat Ships are now actually suitable for Combat.

In some cases the Shield Destruction phase takes longer, but the Shield Regeneration phase also takes longer, which should balance it out again.

I had to think about fitting values for some Ships that are not in E:D, the Boa, Mamba Mk II, Merlin and Mongoose. I have also added values for the “Missing Ships” that you can find on the Wiki.

While i was at it, i also added Prismatic and Bi-Weave Shields to the list.

Have fun with it, i hope it improves your Game :)
